

FARM AND FIRE SIDE

SOUTHERN PLANTER AND FARMER
The Oldest and Ablest Agricultural Journal in the South. Subscription, $2.00 a year, Richmond, Va.

We will furnish this excellent and popular Agricultural Journal, with our "up to date" year for $2.50, or six months for $1.50. Every farmer should have it.

Post-Natal Influences.

The list of post-natal influences is very long. It includes every thing that promotes health and life, or disease and death. The more obvious ones are the situation and construction of our homes, air and food, light and warmth, water and drainage, sewage and disinfection.

1. Rural homes are nearly always more salubrious than a city one, and yet not always. For a rural home may be healthy in itself, but its surroundings may be malarious grounds. A sluggish stream may pass through it and bring to the filth of some not distant city. Any man who has the means of choosing would avoid malarious districts—alluvial formations, made by the washings of sluggish streams in ages past.
Such lands absorb and retain a large amount of moisture, and so are constantly in hot seasons generating malarious forces. Their soils are loose and spongy and contain a large amount of vitiated air. Such lands contain from 20 to 30 per cent. of vitiated air, that is usually hastening to the surface and poisoning the air above. Chemists have shown that this ground air generates and exudes a large per cent. of carbonic acid gas, or dioxide of carbon as it is more properly called, because it is composed of two parts of oxygen and one of carbon. Pure air contains not more than five parts in 10,000, while the air of fields recently enriched by manure or decomposing vegetable and animal material, over 200 parts may be found. Forest lands and loamy soils over eighty. Grave-yard air, the emanations from sewers and cesspools find their way to the purer air above and vitiate it in a greater or less degree. In some cases such air as well as illuminating gas may travel through the soil and enter cellars and visit the occupants of the tenements above.

Not only ground air but ground water impairs the salubrity of a dwelling place. Obstructing the surface drainage, checking the course of streams, and forming artificial ponds may increase. Damp soils tend to induce consumption, rheumatism and other severe results of air, that is saturated with coldness and moisture. "Catching cold" is the cause of many maladies.
Even in warm seasons of the year, warmth and damp relax the tissues and invite diseases of the severest type—fevers, dysentery and other disturbances of the alimentary canal.

In selecting a locality for a home the soil should always be considered. Any soil or place that retains a large per cent. of water should be avoided. Hard soil and stone, limestone and granite surfaces permit water to pass quietly on its downward way. Soil clayey on deeply cultivated land absorbs and retains a large amount of water; some dry lands absorb all that strikes upon its surface, but allows it to go downward and onward as it may. Clayey lands then should be avoided.
They retain too large an amount of moisture for the life and health of man. Even animals avoid them.
Artificial grounds are quite as bad, especially if made from the waste of various places, decaying animal and vegetable materials, the sweepings of streets and the contents of cess-pools and sewers, as is done in Chicago. In such a city we need not wonder that infants wilt and die in crowds. The locality we have chosen is on a gentle slope of a gravelly soil, looking towards the south. No marsh is near.
No sluggish stream sends its poisonous miasma to our home. No forest trees are near enough to exclude the vital influences of the sun.
It is no doubt true, that trees around a dwelling yield some protection to a home in some sections of a country. They may protect it against malaria; they may purify the air, but they also do harm if placed so near a dwelling as to throw a dense shade upon it. The direct rays of the sun contribute largely to the health of any dwelling and do as much good at least as the trees.
Leaves of trees and shrubs may fit the air for our respiration by way of absorbing carbonic acid, decomposing it into oxygen and carbon, retaining the carbon yielding oxygen to the encircling air. This is theoretically true, but practically it is only an imaginary value. We, however, believe in acting on principles well established. The sunny side of a dwelling or a street is not only the healthiest but the pleasantest. We have for many years observed that the shady side of streets and blocks of houses yielded us a larger income for our services than the sunny. During the heat of summer, windows may be shaded, but during other months the general rays of the life-giving sun contribute largely to health and life, especially in the growing period of existence. Trees, then, at a proper distance from a dwelling may be useful but should never exclude the sun. After all, very few human beings can have a dwelling of their choice. Nearly all men are struggling for a living, and are glad to get any home, that can shelter them from winds and storms or protect them in quietness and sleep during the dark hours of night.

Sunday Visiting.

I am not disposed to be over-strict about keeping the Sabbath, but still I must confess that I hold some old-fashioned notions on the subject, and among other things I believe that Sunday should be, so far as possible, a day of rest for every living creature on the premises. The farmer, the hired man, the children, and the horses generally do rest, but in nine cases out of ten Sunday is the hardest day of the whole week for the farmer's wife. "Day of rest," indeed! Precious little rest the stay-at-home woman gets, if she happens to be so unfortunate as to live in one of those neighborhoods where the people are given to Sunday visiting.
How much rest can a woman get while sweltering over a hot stove cooking dinner for a wagon-load of company? If the cooking were all, one might endure it for forty or fifty consecutive Sundays, but the "company" generally brings a lot of children, and as a natural consequence the whole house is torn upside down, and it takes two or three hours right out of the best half of Monday forenoon to put things to rights again. I know whereof I speak for I once lived in a neighborhood where fully one-half of the people were in the habit of visiting Sundays. They came by twos and by threes, by sixes and by sevens, uncles, aunts and cousins, people who "went to school with John," and I firmly believe that every man, woman or child in that community "went to school with John," people who had known John's grandfather, the inevitable "old army friend," and John must have been on intimate terms with a whole brigade at least; people who knew my brother's first wife's sister's husband's mother, and people whom I never saw or heard of before, and who didn't even know any of our "relations," made my Sundays regular days of torment and hard work. My experience is but the experience of hundreds of farmers' wives. Said one woman:
"I am tired to death of so much company on Sundays, but I don't see any way to help myself." Well, I endure it as long as my strength and patience held out, but not having a very large stock of either on hand matters soon came to a crisis, and I declared that "this having a houseful of company every Sunday taunt and should be stopped." "How will you do it?" asked the wise man. "You will be sure to offend somebody." "And I don't care if I do!" I retorted. "I am sure that I hope some of the tribe will get so mad that they will never spend another Sunday in this house!"

When I make up my mind to do a thing I generally do it, and I soon froze out my Sunday visitors.
I don't know whether I offended anybody or not, and I don't care.
Now my poor over-worked sisters, who have been bored and tired to death, cheated out of your only day of rest by Sunday visitors, put your feet down with emphasis and maintain your right to rest on Sundays.
You can get rid of your Sunday company without offending anyone whose good opinion is really worth having. When they ask you to "come over some Sunday," gravely inform them that you shall be most happy to go some week day, but that you do not approve of Sunday visiting, and besides you have to work hard enough during six days of the week, and need all the rest you can crowd into the seventh. The sensible people will open their eyes and stay away, and when those who cannot take a hint come as usual, entertain them until church time, then excuse yourself as politely as possible, and deliberately go to church. Rude? Perhaps so; but you have to kick some people.
And you who are in the habit of visiting Sundays, going from house to house seeking what you may devour, go to church in the future, or stay at home, and leave your neighbors at liberty to do likewise.

MANHOOD: How Lost, How Restored.

Just published a new edition of Culverwell's Celebrated Essay on the radical cure (without medicine) of Gonorrhea, or venereal disease, including the treatment of the testes, prostate, bladder, and all the organs of the male system. This work is a complete and reliable guide to the restoration of manhood, and is the only work of the kind that has been published in this country. It is the result of many years of experience, and is the work of a man who has been successful in restoring many thousands of men to health and vigor. It is a work of great value, and is the only work of the kind that has been published in this country.
